Ian Wang:

Exit the Zachry building and head onto Spence Street.

Make sure you face away from University Drive (There will be many cars there and not very many pedestrians).

Walk for 0.9 of a mile, till you see Ross Street.

Turn right onto Ross Street.

Continue on ross street till you see Jones Street which connects to Old Main Drive via a leftward curve.

Walk the entire curve, don't turn left until you see Joe Routt Boulevard.

The MSC will be on your left and across the street.

Cross the street on pedestrian passing lines, don't jaywalk (You can if you want though).

Enter under the motivational words that are in brown on top of the entrances to the MSC through glass sliding doors.

Welcome to the MSC, you may or may not run into creepy people trying to convince you to join things on your way in...

- A. Brock's because it included how to exit the Zachary Building. It also was simple enough for anyone to follow.

- B. They took different routes to get to the MSC, used different landmarks, and different distances to get to the destination.
- C. All started at Zachary and ended at the MSC. We also tried to be the simplest with directions.
- D. Very familiar: Brock's is best it has common building names and an easy way for someone to travel if they know campus.

Non-Familiar: Ian's has you follow roads the entire time making it easy if you didn't know campus.

Wheelchair: Ian's has you follow roads which mean simple sidewalks

Jogging: Connor's has you going through the academic plaza, a nice view.

Rush: Connors's has a short path cutting through campus thus being the shortest.

Overall feel: Ian's passes by the major building including Kyle Field.

- E. Is it touring, speed, or simplicity? What are the means of getting around walking, car, bike, or bus? What other buildings does this person want to see or access? How well do they know campus? Do we have to be simpler or say detailed instructions?
